The Leopold's Legacy

Leopold's Ice Cream was founded in 1919 by three brothers from Greece, George, Peter, and Basil Leopold. Once in Savannah they perfected their secret formulas and created the world famous Leopold's Ice Cream. The brothers opened their parlor on the corner of Gwinnett and Habersham streets in Savannah where two streetcar lines intersected. Many a rider would jump off the streetcar and entreat the motorman to wait as they got a frozen delight!

Leopold's ice cream and sherbet molds were a holiday highlight in Savannah's finest clubs and the shop was always a popular destination after concerts, dances, and high school football and basketball games.

Famed lyricist Johnny Mercer grew up a block away from Leopold's and worked at the shop as a boy. Later, he was a faithful customer when he was home from Hollywood and even told Peter he would write a song about Leopold's famous "Tutti-Frutti" ice cream, which had become a Leopold's hallmark and Savannah favorite.

Stratton Leopold, Peter's youngest child (pictured above on his father's knee and today with his wife, Mary) learned the art of making premium ice cream as a child. Upon his father's passing, Stratton took over the business, continuing his family's legacy. He later left Savannah to pursue his dream of working in Hollywood. Today, Stratton is an active member of the Hollywood motion picture community, serving as a Producer on films such as Mission Impossible 3, The Sum of All Fears, The General's Daughter and Parker. Stratton has worked on many other blockbuster hits during his career in the film industry including The Big Chill and John Carpenter's They Live. Props and posters from these films can be found in the shop today.

Though Stratton left Savannah to pursue his Hollywood dream, Leopold's Ice Cream continued to be a Savannah tradition carried on by other members of the Leopold family. In the summer of 2004, Stratton and Mary officially opened the new Broughton Street location. They continue their legendary family business proudly using many fixtures from the original store including the black marble soda fountain, wooden back bar and telephone booth. Leopold's Ice Cream is hand crafted in historic downtown Savannah using the original, secret recipes and techniques handed down to Stratton by his father.
